SURVIVAL CARDS

Print these eight. Cut them out. Put them in your pack.

Eight cards chosen because they are the ones that matter most and get skipped most: how to be found, when to turn back, what actually goes wrong first when it gets cold, and why food is the last thing to worry about.

QUICK HACK G7 Signal With What Actually Works You need to be seen from the air or a distance. 1 Use a real mirror, a phone screen or polished metal 2 Make a V with two fingers at arm's length 3 Put the target in the V and flash across it 4 Three of anything means distress INSTANT ! A pebble or a stone will not reflect. It needs a genuinely mirrored surface to be seen at any range. TIP A whistle carries further than a shout and costs you almost no breath.	SMART SHORTCUT B1 The Three Minute Rule You never know when to add or shed a layer. 1 Sweating three minutes into walking → take the mid layer off 2 Cold three minutes after stopping → put it back on 3 Do it the moment you notice, not at the next break INSTANT TIP Damp clothing is what makes you cold later. Deal with sweat before you deal with cold.	SURVIVAL SKILL Y1 North Without A Compass You are turned around and have no compass. 1 Stand a straight stick in open ground 2 Mark the shadow tip with a stone 3 Wait fifteen minutes and mark the new tip 4 The line between the marks runs roughly east–west 15 MIN ! It is approximate. Use it to hold a direction, not to find a precise point. TIP First mark is west, second is east, in either hemisphere.
SURVIVAL SKILL Y11 Food Is The Last Priority You have run out of food. 1 Order of survival: air, shelter, water, then food 2 A healthy adult copes without food for far longer than without water 3 Slow down, work in the cool, sleep warm 4 Spend the energy on being found, not on foraging N/A ! The old 'universal edibility test' is not recommended. Some plant toxins act in tiny amounts or long after the test would have passed. TIP Hunger feels urgent and rarely is. Cold and dehydration are the things that actually kill.	EMERGENCY R5 Getting Cold Shivering, cold hands, going quiet. 1 Get them out of wind and off the ground 2 Swap wet layers for dry, or add dry layers over the top 3 Warm sweet drink if they are fully alert 4 Shelter and insulate — including underneath ACT NOW ! If shivering stops while they are still cold, or they become confused or clumsy, this is an emergency. Handle them gently and call for help.	EMERGENCY R10 Calling For Help You need emergency services. 1 Where you are — coordinates, or a described route in 2 What has happened and how many people 3 Injuries, and whether they are conscious and breathing 4 Weather on the ground, and your phone number 2 MIN ! Give location first. If the call drops, that is the one thing that lets them reach you. TIP Screenshot your position before you lose signal — it stays readable offline.

SAFETY	MULTI-USE
E3 Tell Someone Nobody knows where you are. 1 Give one person your route and your return time 2 Agree what they do if you are late 3 Include your vehicle and where it is parked 4 Message them when you are safely out ! This single habit shortens more searches than any piece of kit you can buy.	W6 The Bandana, Fully Used The most useful cloth you can carry. 1 Towel, sling, pot holder, sweatband 2 Dust mask, or a sun cover for your neck 3 Water pre-filter before boiling 4 Bright marker on a route you will retrace GRAMS TIP Tie it to your pack where you can see it. Kit you have to dig for is kit you will not use.

Eight down. Eighty-one to go.

The full deck adds fire, shelter, water, camp cooking, a seven-day skills challenge, and ten scenario cards with no comfortable answer — plus the guide explaining all five ways to play it.
